Wilson gets two Purple Hearts after four decades

By Larry Rowell
Editor

It took 43 years, but Earl Wilson finally got two Purple Hearts he rightfully earned, and deserved, for being wounded in the Vietnam War. The lanky and quiet Casey Countian was wounded twice in January 1971 and never received his medals until last week.

Wilson was awarded the purple heart with an oak leaf cluster in an impressive ceremony attended by more than 200 people on July 2 at the Central Kentucky AG/EXPO Center. Local VFW member Claud Wyatt served as master of ceremonies.

Blake Durham, Wilson's grandson, opened the ceremony with a trumpet performance of the Battle Hymn of the Republic followed by his singing The Star Spangled Banner.

Kentucky U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell was in Liberty on July 2 at the Central Kentucky AG/EXPO Center to present two Purple Heart medals to Earl Wilson, who was wounded in Vietnam in January 1971. Wilson was honorably discharged without ever receiving the medals. Shown with Wilson is his wife, Brenda.

More than 1,500 attend Fourth of July events

By Abigail Whitehouse
Staff Writer

With only eight days of planning, the Independence Celebration parade in Liberty brought together more than 1,500 people from across Kentucky and the United States.

Local veteran Glen Phillips Jr., a retired Army staff sergeant, stepped up to facilitate this year's parade after being told there was a 'lack of interest' and that the parade had been cancelled.

After holding an action committee meeting a week before the fourth, there was an outpouring of support and numerous citizens of Casey County and Liberty called to offer their help in any way they could.

Phillips said the total number in attendance, including those participating in the Independence Day Celebration Parade, was probably close to the total population of Liberty, which is 2,100.

"There were so many people, regular citizens, who reached out and offered to help," Phillips said. "We didn't have to go around asking for money or begging for help. The people volunteered."

The parade, which lasted about

Reusser's trial set for Jan. 5

By Larry Rowell
Editor

It was over before it ever began. A mistrial has been declared in the trial of Jason Reusser, who was charged in early 2012 with multiple sex crimes against two of his daughters. One allegation is that he engaged in intercourse with a female less than 14 years old on 20 separate occasions from Sept. 18, 2009 to Jan. 15, 2012.

A jury was seated on Monday morning in Casey County Circuit Court and then sent home about noon in order for Judge Judy Vance to rule on motions filed by Reusser's attorney, Philip George, of Lebanon.

Among the motions filed, the majority of which Vance overruled, George objected to not having a complete 45 minute video and audio tape of an interview Sheriff Jerry Coffman and Deputy Chad Weddle conducted with Reusser on Jan. 20, 2012.

What then Commonwealth Attorney Brian Wright furnished to George on March 26, 2012, was a taped interview of about 5 minutes. Wright stepped down from that position in January 2013 after an unsuccessful bid for the Circuit Court Judge's seat the previous November.

Vance said on Monday afternoon that she would consider the motion concerning the video yesterday (Tuesday) before bringing the jury in.

Commonwealth Attorney Gail Williams told Vance on Tuesday morning that George had the video for more than two years.

"They never made any request to my office to provide the tape they watched until the day of the trial to reveal that to us. We believe they waited to have that tape. His client told him that interview went much longer than the five minutes he got. There's a letter in the court file that Mr. Wright signs that states he provided that to him. We're going to ask the court to go forward,"

World War II: 'The Greatest Generation,' Part 4

MORGAN

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a multi-part series of stories about local World War II veterans and their families.

By Larry Rowell
Editor

"The uniform was the main thing." It was that military uniform that first attracted Delbert W. Morgan to enlist in the Marines during World War II. People around these parts know him as "Spot," a nickname his father also carried.

Morgan said that it was the uniform he saw Casey County native Ray Smith wear, along with the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor that ushered the United States into the war, that made him like the uniform.

"I liked it, and when World War II broke out, it made us all mad," he said.

Morgan, who grew up in Liberty, was just 16 when he decided to join the Marines. On May 5, 1942 Morgan was out of school and asked his dad if he would sign for him to join the Marines. His dad, a World War I veteran, refused. Weighing just over 100 pounds, Morgan went to Lexington and lied about his age to get in, telling a recruiter that he was 17. Because military recruiters were pushed to sign up more and more young men, Morgan had little trouble making it.

In June, Morgan was in the Marines and on his way to San Diego, Cal., for training. See MORGAN/3

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Reader thanks officials for their service

A patriot is a person who vigorously supports their country and is prepared to defend it against enemies or detractors. With all the hoop-la about the public celebration of the Fourth of July, I am reminded that not all patriots are veterans – likewise, not all veterans are true patriots.

I've heard many negative comments these past couple of weeks about two people in our community who work hard every day to make our small town a good place to live and come home to.

Speaking of the good that is, let me kindly remind folks about the good that Steve Sweeney and Blaine Staat have brought to our town. I know the mayor has often given of his personal resources to help feed the hungry, often buying shoes and clothing for children. He is a staunch supporter every day of furthering the education of our children.

This past weekend, while the media prepared to descend on our town to champion the voice of one person on one day, it was Mayor Sweeney who was quietly out picking trash up off the streets.

Blaine Staat, a Navy veteran, has taken leadership of the Chamber of Commerce to heart as well. He champions every day the good in Casey County, the benefits of healthy living, charitable 5K runs to raise funds for a variety of good causes – and he talks every day about the joy he and his family have found making their home in our small town.

And I do wish that one voice that was heard had encouraged the media to turn its cameras toward the many other good things that our town hosted during the July 4th festivities.

Little is gained by shaming others and pushing folks down so that one alone is praised. It is my great privilege to work alongside other business leaders in this town who share the vision for real growth here.

I am mindful that the freedom I enjoy to live and work here comes from both patriots and veterans, like Steve Sweeney and Blaine Staat, who show up to work every day to promote growth and business here and somehow manage to do so with servant hearts even in the face of undeserved adversity. Thank you, Steve and Blaine, for your service every day for Liberty.

The men in my life

I am an unclaimed treasure. Although I never married, I have always had lots of lovely men in my life. What brought all this on, you ask? I'm glad you asked.

I got a phone call recently from Ray Short saying he was on his way to my house with something for me. Now I haven't seen Ray since he was knee-high to a grasshopper. He was a cute little kid with beautiful huge brown eyes. He still has those eyes. Anyway, he appeared at my door with one of my favorite things in this world -- green beans! Not only were they green beans, they were greasy beans. I drool just thinking about greasy beans. He also had some new potatoes to cook with them and to top it off, some home-cured pork shoulder meat for seasoning the beans. Heaven!

There's another green bean man in my life. Harold Buis always brings me his wonderful white half-runners, usually the very last ones of the season. That makes them so special.

In the dead of winter when tomatoes are like wet pink cardboard, Mike Short, Ray's brother, brings me luscious Florida-grown tomatoes. They aren't quite as good as our summertime tomatoes here but they keep me from dying an unnatural death with the craving for them.

I miss Jiggs Judd, another man in my life. He kept me in fresh corn, tomatoes, new potatoes, and, occasionally, freshly caught fish that had been cleaned and filleted. He was a gardener extraordinaire and his garden was always like a work of art. I once called him "an artist in dirt".

Joberta
WELLS
Columnist

Speaking of fish, another man in my life is John Coffey. He brought me several "messes" of the best fresh bluegill that had been cleaned and frozen immediately. I had several feasts with that priceless gift.

What can I tell you about Bob Estes? I couldn't do without him in my life. He fixes fences, feeds my cattle, cleans gutters, and does things around my house that would make any woman jealous that they didn't have him around.

Another man in my life is Tom Estes, Bob's brother. When I have a question or a problem, who do I call? Tom! Besides being a great man to have in my life for things like that, he's also the best storyteller in the world. I promise you he will have you rolling on the ground laughing. He really should have done stand-up comedy.

Some of the other men I am fortunate to have had in my life are Ken Coffman, the Kings (Kevin, Chris, and Michael), and Richard Weddle. These men have gotten me out of messes more times than one and I'm glad they're around.

These aren't the only men in my life but I am running out of space here. I also haven't even mentioned my male family members who take good care of me and keep me in line. I am blessed.

With all these men around, who needs a husband? What a hoot!

A good time was had by all

By all accounts, the downtown Liberty Fourth of July celebration was a rousing success and well attended by local residents and out of state folks.

Especially impressive was the parade with all the motorcycles, muscle cars, and the grand marshals, Purple Heart recipients Earl Wilson, Jesse Wethington, Freddie Whited, Tony Emerson, and J. L. Coe.

The kid's parade was spectacular as there were about 25 entries, ranging from bicycle riders to kids dressed up in decorated Red Flyer wagons sporting patriotic themes.

The events held on the Village Green behind City Hall prior to the parades served as a gathering place for families, friends, and out-of-town guests.

Kids of all ages enjoyed the ice cream and watermelon eating contests as well as the 1,000 free hot dogs and ample supply of soft drinks that were donated for the occasion.

Attendees enjoyed corn toss games and probably 30 kids or more got their hoop on with the hula hoop contest.

And, as always, the festive night was capped off by a marvelous fire works show sponsored by the City of Liberty.

Kudos to Glen Phillips for organizing a committee for the events in little more than a week's time. Great job and you are to be congratulated for a job well done.

I hear that this informal committee will begin meeting soon to plan next year's activities.

However, even with the success of this event, it didn't come without some controversy.

Some outsiders I spoke with came to Liberty with the intention of making a statement about supporting a town that had canceled Fourth of July activities for a "lack of interest."

Phillips appeared twice on a national TV news program where he spoke about the importance of the holiday and the need to "give freedom a kick."

While this column is in no way a criticism of Phillips, I wanted to address the issue of some pointing a finger at Liberty Mayor Steve Sweeney and Chamber Director Blaine Staat based on remarks Phillips made on a national news program.

First and foremost, in the six years that I have known Steve Sweeney, I have come to realize that no one in this community loves Liberty, and liberty itself, more than he does.

While the mayor and I have have had several heated conversations from time to time, I respect him for his daily sacrificial service that he renders to this city.

When the late Ronnie Joe Wesley was stranded in a front end loader in May 2010 in the middle of raging floodwaters on Wallace Wilkinson Boulevard, Sweeney left Wesley — who couldn't swim — in the cab of the loader and jumped into the waters to catch a ride on a passing port-a-john to find help for his friend. I still would pay money to have a photo of that.

Sweeney spends countless hours listening to city residents who have problems and also who have re-elected him three times as mayor. They know he cares about them and where they live.

As for Staat, a veteran of the United States Navy, he also works for the good of our community and has even opened a small business in Liberty.

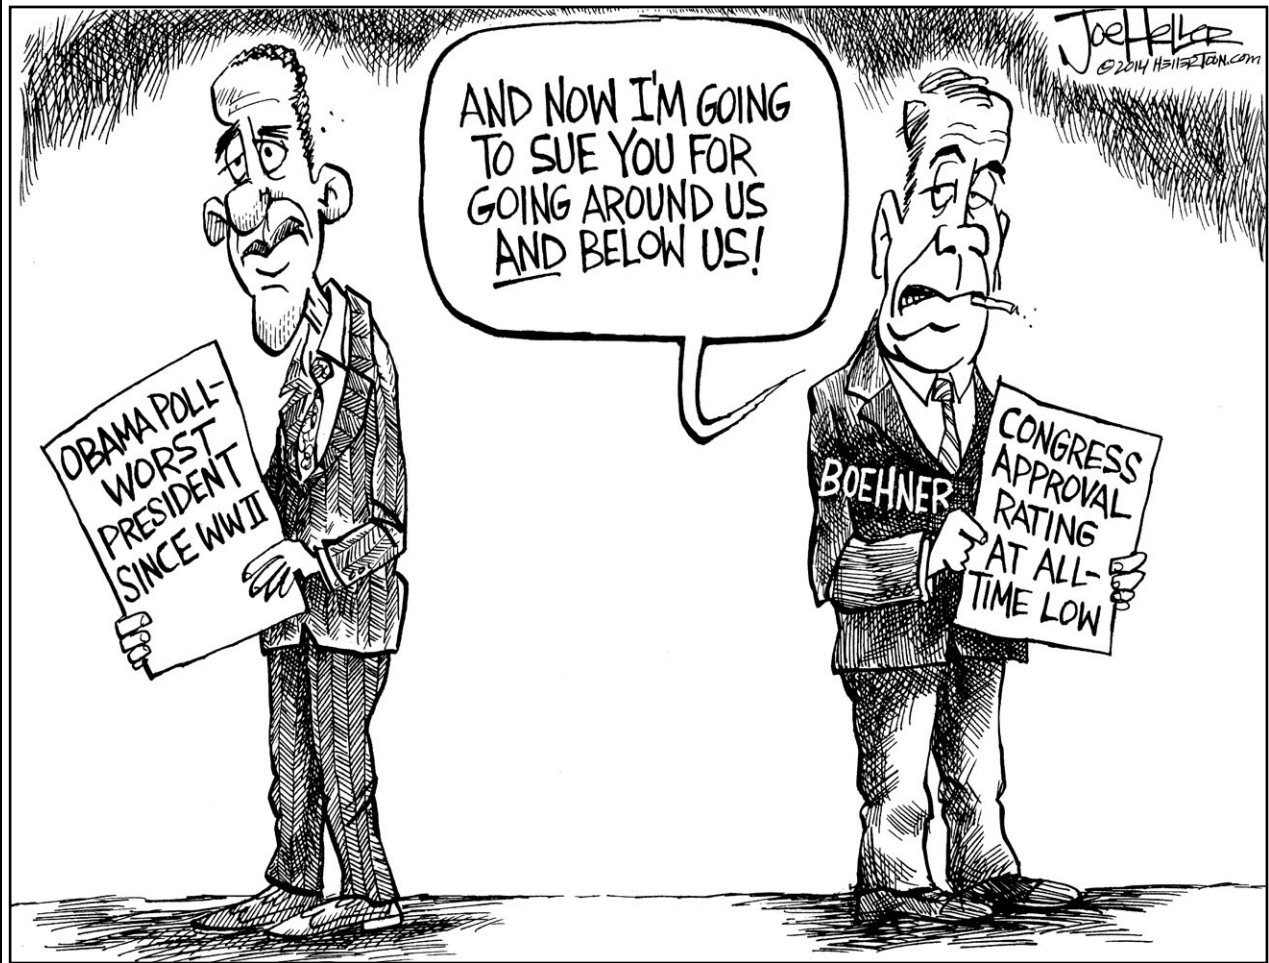

While planning for past events have fallen to Sweeney and Staat by default — where was everybody when events were canceled in 2011 because of a lack of volunteers? Did anyone express concern in 2012 when events were again on the calendar?

Also, why should it fall to the mayor or chamber director to organize holiday activities?

By the way, the annual Christmas event in downtown, organized by Staat and Sweeney and a few others, has been well attended in past years, offering activities, food, and a parade.

My point is this. Why should it fall to the mayor and chamber director to organize holiday events? If everyone steps up, then we all win.

And in the case of the fourth of July 2014, we all won.

How horses teach humans

Growing up in Kentucky as the daughter of a horse trainer, I was exposed to an entire world of life lessons at a very young age.

When I was 8 or 9, I began taking riding lessons at Robert Murphy's Stables in Lexington.

To pay for my lessons, I would help groom and saddle school-horses and assist the instructor during other lessons.

After a while, my dad saw that I was dedicated and decided it was time to get my own pony.

For $500, we found Popcorn, a white and yellow speckled pony, who stood at about 12 and a half hands tall. (For those of you who aren't familiar with horse-height measurements, this is around 50 inches.)

Popcorn was the perfect height because when and if he decided he wasn't going to do what I was asking him to do, I didn't have too far to fall.

Popcorn and I learned about ourselves and each other and subconsciously

Abigail
WHITEHOUSE
Staff Writer

I learned lessons that I continue to carry into every aspect of my life as an adult.

Patience

Horses have a mind of their own. There were times that Popcorn's stubbornness would make me so mad that I wanted to jump off and walk him right back into the barn.

At first, my temper would rise and I would whine to my dad saying, "He just won't listen to me!"

My father, who never lost his temper on a horse, would say to me, "Anger won't get you anywhere with a horse."

I learned to relax, take a deep breath, and power through the problem rather than dropping the reins, throwing my hands up in the air, and giving up.

Trust

As a teenager, I had a hard time trusting anyone other than myself and I wasn't interested in putting forth any effort.

But when I started riding horses I realized that my life was dependent upon the relationship between myself and the horse.

I wasn't alone up in that saddle. There was a large animal beneath me, waiting for me to tell him where to go and how to get there.

The more time I spent with my horse, the more I trusted him, and vice-versa.

The same goes for human relationships – trust comes with time and the repetition of trustworthy behavior.

Perserverance

I've fallen off more horses than I can count. There have been times that I have been thrown over a jump and hit the ground hard enough to make me want to quit riding for good.

Fortunately for me, my father would never hear of it.

The same thing came out of his mouth every single time I fell off – "Get back in the saddle."

It didn't matter how much I moaned and groaned, if I was conscious and had no broken bones, my butt was getting back on that horse.

I truly believe this is the most important lesson that I have ever learned because each time that I fell and had to get back on a horse, I felt a little more confident in myself. And that confidence carried me and grew with me, each time I overcame my fear and conquered my failures.

I know now, 10 years later, that it still doesn't matter how many times I fall – I know that I will always stand up, brush the dirt off my knees, and climb right back in the saddle.

A history of the Purple Heart was then shared by Christopher Smrt, Region II Commander with the Military Order of the Purple Heart.

Smrt said the award, which came into being as a purple cloth heart dating back to 1782, was established by Gen. George Washington at the end of the Revolutionary War as a way to boost morale among his troops.

Today's Purple Heart medal was first issued in 1932, with Gen. Douglas MacArthur receiving the first medal for wounds he received in action during World War I.

A last minute addition to the program included Kentucky legislators Sen. Jimmy Higdon, R-Lebanon, and Rep. Mike Harmon, R-Danville. Higdon and Harmon presented Wilson with a Senate Resolution honoring his Purple Heart and a commission as a Kentucky Colonel, respectively.

Retired Staff Sgt. Glen Phillips next told attendees how he came to be involved with helping Wilson and his family obtain the Purple Heart. Phillips is well known for helping veterans with health or other needs.

"I realized we needed a lot of help. It's something I couldn't do on my own. So we contacted Sen. McConnell's office and he wanted to help. We had nothing. Not one document but as the good senator will explain as to what happened with Earl's injuries, there's a paper trail a mile long," Phillips said.

Just a few days later, Phillips was contacted by McConnell's office and told Wilson was to receive the long awaited medal.

"There's no way we can completely make a wrong right but as Earl told me 'we can't go back 43 years but we sure can start over again by making it right right now,'" Phillips said.

McConnell awards medal

Sen. Mitch McConnell, Republican leader in the U.S. Senate, paid tribute to Wilson's daughters, who urged their dad to seek the medal.

"This event is a testament today to the unbreakable bonds of family and friendships," McConnell said, referring to Crystal Davis and Melissa Durham, Wilson's daughters, who wrote the senator a letter in April about their dad.

Before making the presentation, McConnell called attention to three words that MacArthur had addressed to the crowd at West Point when he received his Purple Heart.

"Duty, honor, country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are the rallying points to build courage when courage seems to fail, to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith, to create hope, when hope becomes forlorn," McConnell quoted MacArthur as saying.

McConnell said that these words are particularly suited to Specialist Earl Wilson, who, in the jungles of Vietnam, found courage, faith, and hope, in the midst of two very bad missions.

Having grown up on Dry Ridge, the son of James Oscar and Virgie Frances Wall Wilson, Earl was 19 years old when he was drafted into the U.S. Army on Nov. 17, 1969 and was sent to Ft. Polk, La., that Wilson said was the hottest, most miserable place, but a perfect prelude for Vietnam.

Wilson spent July 1970-July 1971 criss-crossing the jungles and mountains of Vietnam as a member of Company D, 1st Battalion, 6th Infantry Regiment, 23rd Infantry Division.

His unit came under fire one night in January 1971 and when the sun came up on Jan. 7, Wilson's unit pursued the enemy.

Encountering a gate along the path, a fellow soldier yanked on the gate, setting off a booby trap grenade left by the enemy. Wilson, along with several other soldiers, was knocked to the ground, suffering from shrapnel wounds to his leg.

After receiving care for his wounds, Wilson was back on patrol on Jan. 25 when he was on point, leading his unit. He left the front position to go back and check on his best friend, Specialist William Creech Jr., from Paris, Ill.

As Wilson approached his friend, Creech stepped on a land mine, dying instantly, with shrapnel striking Wilson in the head and arm. The blast was so horrific that it tore down trees nearby that were up to 5 inches in diameter.

After another stint in a military hospital, Wilson returned home on July 8, 1971 to enjoy married life with Brenda and raise his daughters.

"We're grateful for your service, Earl, and we're grateful to celebrate your sacrifice. It's never too late, ladies and gentlemen, to honor the brave," McConnell said.

Costs of injuries linger

Although Wilson paid for the Purple Hearts with his service and sacrifice, life today finds that he's still paying a price for his military service.

Wilson contracted malaria while in Vietnam and was hospitalized for it. He wonders now if it can come back, even 43 years later.

In addition, Wilson has a 20 percent disability from the Veteran's Administration for a hearing loss and a 30 percent disability for Agent Orange, a herbicide spray used by the military to kill the dense foliage in the jungles of Vietnam.

As a result of the Agent Orange, Wilson has an irregular heartbeat, and doctors told him that a heart valve pumps backward.

And not only has it cost Wilson in terms of his health, it also cost his two college educated daughters scholarships that they could have received years ago had Wilson gotten his Purple Hearts when he first left Vietnam.

Still, Earl said that he's not bitter that life has turned out the way it has, getting the medals years later.

"It meant more to my girls than it did to me. I'm proud to get this. If I'd had it years ago, I could have enjoyed it more," he said.

30 minutes, was led by five grand marshals — Jessie Wethington, Freddie Whited, Earl Wilson, Tony Emerson, and J.L. Coe.

Behind the grand marshals a plethora of participants followed including two Corvette clubs, the Patriot Guard, and at least 200 motorcycles.

Steve Hill, a former resident of Liberty, flew a vintage World War II plane over the celebration.

Citizens of Liberty and Casey County were not the only people who traveled into the city to be a part of the festivities.

Visitors from Michigan, New Orleans, Alabama, and all over the state of Kentucky came to be a part of the Independence Day Celebration.

Stephen Lechler, a veteran of the Louisiana Air National Guard, 159 Fighting Squadron, rode his motorcycle from Georgia to Liberty to show his support and volunteer his time and energy to the cause.

Lechler was in Georgia when he heard about the recent controversy surrounding Liberty's Independence Day parade on the radio. The following day he saw Phillips' interview on Fox News and decided to make a trip to Liberty.

"I just said you know what, I'm packing my stuff and I'm going to Liberty," Lechler said.

Lechler got a map, found Liberty's location and on July 2, rode into the city on his motorcycle.

While checking into his room at the Bedford Inn, Lechler acquired Phillips' phone number and the following day, Phillips visited him at the Inn to discuss the parade and how he could contribute.

Lechler said after witnessing the disgusting way Vietnam veterans were treated when they came back to the U.S. and with everything going on with today's Veteran's Administration, he has been largely for honoring veterans in any way he can.

"That's why I am here," Lechler said. "I wanted to show whomever that it means something to more than just the people in Liberty. It means something to everyone that has any kind of connection with military, through either themselves or family members or friends that they grew up with that didn't make it."

He said these veterans of today are volunteering and the men and women of today's wars need to be honored in every way you can imagine.

During his stay, Lechler said the people of Liberty whom he encountered were very open and spoke with him as if he were their neighbor.

Darra Roy, wife of local Army veteran Phillip Roy, was born and raised in Liberty and volunteered to help with the preparations.

Roy visited local businesses and gathered sponsorships for door prizes.

"Everyone I spoke to was incredibly receptive and said they were so glad we were doing this," Roy said.

Roy said being able to be a part of the parade was a humbling honor.

"Crowds were clapping and people were crying," Roy said. "I was crying and even my husband was misty-eyed during the parade. It was unreal."

The children's events held earlier in the day were a hit, with numerous participants in the hula hoop and watermelon eating contests.

Phillips said the whole experience has been humbling and he is still in shock from the overwhelming response.

"I just want to thank all of the people from near and far that stood up to support us on Independence Day and helped us celebrate freedom," Phillips said. "The people of Liberty and Casey County were behind this the whole way and this never would have happened without them."

Phillips said the expectations for next year's parade are high and he isn't sure how they're going to beat this year's outcome, but many of the people who traveled to Liberty from out of town have already said they will be back and in greater numbers.

Morgan

ing. While most Marines who lived east of the Mississippi River trained at Parris Island, S.C., Morgan said it was closed.

"Parris Island was quarantined with the measles. Nobody got in or out," he said.

While at 88 years of age Morgan doesn't remember how long he spent in training, he recalls quite well that his drill instructor, Cpl. Plummer, confronted him about his age.

"Morgan, we all know you're just 16, we know you're not 17. If you want out, we'll let you go," Plummer said. But Morgan was adamant about staying.

"I joined the Marine Corps to be a Marine," he said.

Guadalcanal

Morgan arrived in Guadalcanal in October that same year and spent 4 months and 20 days on the island located in the Solomon Islands in the southwest Pacific.

The Japanese took control of the island in May 1942 and began constructing an airfield.

U.S. Marines wrestled control of the airfield away from the enemy in early August, about two months before Morgan arrived on the island.

Now 17, Morgan was assigned to operate a bulldozer and fill in holes that Japanese bombers created in the airfield.

He also had to learn to shoot his Springfield 1903 rifle right handed, which wasn't easy for him.

"I was left handed and I had to change over. They used to make both left handed and right handed rifles for the Marines but I had to shoot right handed," he said.

Operating the bulldozer with Marines perched on both sides with machine guns to protect him, Morgan said that there were Japanese snipers that lurked around the airfield.

"It was scary. I don't lie to nobody. I was scared to death all the time," he said, adding that he often took cover under the heavy bulldozer.

"The Japanese came out with a new bomb that when it hit, they had a stem on it and it was full of razor blades and cut up scissors. It would cut a person all to pieces," he said.

Morgan also took the bulldozer and knocked down coconut trees to make roads for the tanks which sank in swampy areas on the island.

"Most people don't know that when we knocked down a tree, the U.S. paid $700 to Colgate Palmolive, and there was acre after acres of trees," Morgan said.

In addition to maintaining the airfield, Morgan had the grim task of burying hundreds of dead Japanese soldiers with the bulldozer.

Not so friendly fire

While on Guadalcanal, Morgan almost died, but not from Japanese snipers or bombs that frequently fell from the skies.

"McGinnis was our cook and he made 'raisin jack.' He had peaches and raisins and mixed them all together and put them in bags where we kept water and it would ferment. He'd strain it off and make raisin jack and he'd get drunk as a monkey," he said.

One night, McGinnis had his fill of raisin jack and mounted an old Japanese bicycle that he rode around the airfield.

"It rained for two or three days and he ran off in a fox-hole that was filled with water and I started laughing at him. And then I heard that '03 click," Morgan said, referring to McGinnis loading his rifle.

"Red told me 'Chick, you made McGinnis mad. He's got a rifle and he's putting bullets in there. You'd better get your a gone,'" Morgan said. Chick was Morgan's Marine nickname.

Morgan took off as fast as his legs would carry him when suddenly, he heard Red yell "Chick, hit the deck, hit the deck."

Morgan fell between two downed coconut logs just as McGinnis fired the rifle.

"I felt those bullets whiz over me. He was crazy. He was a career Marine and he had just gotten a letter from his wife saying she took up with a 21-year-old boy. It broke his heart and he just went nuts," Morgan said.

Morgan said McGinnis felt terrible about having tried to shoot him.

"You talk about apologizing. He cried like a baby to me and got down on his hands and knees and begged my forgiveness. I told him I'm a baptized Methodist and I'll forgive anybody if they're sincere. After that, I could get anything I wanted from the mess hall," he said, smiling.

Commendation

The Japanese made another effort to take Guadalcanal and Henderson field, where the airstrip was. Bombing another part of the island, 22 Marine torpedo bombers were parked on the airfield awaiting takeoff to attack the enemy planes.

"One of our planes, piloted by Major Blaine, had landed and ran out of gas, blocking the airfield.

Morgan jumped on the bulldozer and went out onto the airfield, hooked the plane to the massive machine and pulled it down to the taxiway. The other planes were then able to take off to defend the island.

Morgan said that a captured Japanese pilot was asked why they didn't bomb the U.S. planes that were lined up on the runway, unable to take off because of Blaine's disabled plane.

"You think we're fools? Those planes were dummies," the Japanese pilot told his captors.

For his bravery that day, Morgan was awarded the Navy/Marine Corps Commendation ribbon.

Rest camp

At the end of his four months and 20 days on Guadalcanal, Morgan developed nerve problems and the doctors wanted to send him to a naval hospital at New Zealand for treatment. But before he could go, the majority of his unit either contracted malaria or were carriers of the disease, but not Morgan.

Morgan, along with the rest of the unit, was sent to a rest camp at New Hebrides. Leaving the camp, Morgan returned to Liberty for 30 days in October 1943.

A month later, Morgan arrived at El Toro Marine Base in California, where he stayed until late 1944 and then embarked for the Marshall Islands.

Marshall Islands

During his 11 month stay on the Marshall Islands in the northern Pacific, Morgan worked with a Navy Seabee unit to build seven-and-a-half miles of causeway, connecting the small islands.

"It was built out of coral reef and that would hold up like concrete. Twice a week we wet it with a water truck and graded it down," he said.

Further service

After leaving the Marshall Islands, Morgan came back to the U.S. to begin married life with Josephine, whom Morgan married on July 9, 1946.

Morgan began courting the Hustonville native in 1943 when he was at home before going to the Marshall Islands.

"She was the most beautiful woman who ever walked this earth. She finished runner-up in a beauty contest to a woman who won the 1945 Miss America contest," he said.

Morgan was honorably discharged from the Marine Corps on Jan. 26, 1946 but chose to stay in the Marine Corps Reserves.

Returning to Liberty, Morgan wouldn't stay long until he was called back to once again serve his country.

Morgan reported to Camp Lejeune N.C. for annual two-week training in July 1950 where he learned that he would become part of a construction unit at different Marine bases beginning in October.

"The Marine Corps wasn't used to hand-to-hand fighting. So we built a complete section of buildings used for training at Camp Lejeune. I also went to Little Creek, Va.," he said.

The desire of Morgan's heart was to be a career Marine but with Josephine and a young son, Larry, it wasn't to be.

"Now listen, I'm telling you right now I'm not living no gypsy life. It's either me or the Marine Corps," Morgan said Josephine told him. "I've always regretted it but I did what I had to do for her. She came before the Marine Corps." He left the Marines for good in 1952.

Life after service

Morgan went on to work for the highway department until 1959 and then was employed as an engineer until he retired in 2000.

His beloved Josephine died on July 9, 2005, after having been married for 62 years.

"Oh yes, I miss her every day," Morgan said, tears filling his eyes.

Now living alone, Morgan remains active in the Liberty United Methodist Church where he served for years as chairman of the board. He also attends a prayer breakfast on Thursday mornings at the Village Restaurant.

He stays in touch with Larry, a retired school administrator and basketball coach for 17 years, who lives with his wife in northern Kentucky. The couple has a daughter, who has two children.

FSA local crop reporting deadline is July 15

The Casey County Farm Service Agency would like to remind local agriculture producers that the crop reporting deadline is July 15 for most crops including tobacco, corn, soybeans, pasture and hay.

A crop report must be on file to be eligible for most programs and is essential if obtaining Federal Crop Insurance. Although the DCP (corn base) program is no longer offered, it is still important for both small and large acreage producers to keep an up to date crop report on file.

Late file fees for crops reported after July 15 are not going to be assessed this year. However, producers should still be vigilant in meeting the deadline as future program guidelines are unknown at this time.

It is also important to note that the FSA office provides GPS measuring services for an initial charge of $46.

Whether you would like to have a garden measured or an entire farm, the FSA office can help.

For any questions please call 606-

Garrard sheriff's daughter dies in crash

Advocate Messenger

An accident in Danville Saturday afternoon claimed the life of the daughter of Garrard County Sheriff Ronald Wardrip, according to Danville Police.

Bobbi Nicole Wardrip of Nicholasville — who went by her middle name, Nicole — was driving on North Ky. 33 and Old Shakertown Road about 2 p.m. Saturday when she lost control of her car. There were no passengers in the car at the time of the accident.

A witness told investigators that Wardrip, 37, was traveling south in a 2004 four-door Oldsmobile when she began to swerve in the roadway and traveled off the right shoulder causing the front of the vehicle to strike a telephone pole.

Boyle County Emergency Medical Services and Danville City Fire Department assisted at the scene.

Boyle County EMS transported Wardrip to Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center where she was pronounced dead.

According to Boyle County Coroner Donald Hamner, the cause of death is blunt-force trauma to the chest and internal organ damage.

Hamner said an autopsy will not be performed.

"Generally, in a single-car accident we do not perform an autopsy," said Hamner.

While a routine toxicology screen was ordered, Hamner said there is no indication that drugs or alcohol were a factor in the accident. He also said it would be difficult to determine if mechanical failure was a factor because of extensive damage to the vehicle. Investigation by the Danville Police Department and Boyle County Coroner's Office is continuing.

Medicare eligibility increases for some seniors

Paducah Sun

Baby boomers are now facing their golden years and, according to some attorneys, many are worried about how their estates will affect their Medicaid eligibility and long-term care.

Joe Harvey Kimmel, a Paducah attorney, has seen a significant increase in the need for elder law services, specifically relating to Medicaid and Veterans Affairs long-term care planning.

"It can be devastating when someone needing treatment at a long-term care facility is disqualified from receiving Medicaid," Kimmel said.

According to Kimmel, Medicaid will look back five years at any transfers of money or property before determining whether it will pay for an applicant's long-term care.

"Medicaid will look back at transfers of property made for less than fair market value or gifts of money within a five-year period and, if they find any, it may disqualify someone from getting their long-term care paid by Medicaid at that time," Kimmel said.

Kimmel added that if an adult child is living with and caring for a parent for two years, Medicaid will allow the parent's home to be gifted to that child without penalty.

Mitchell Ryan, a Murray attorney, has also seen an increase in clients concerned about Medicaid eligibility and care planning come through his doors.

Ryan said that each person has different needs and there are many ways to go about helping someone plan for end-of-life care.

According to Gwenda Bond, assistant communications director for the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services, certain variables come into play regarding the five-year, look-back period.

"Penalties can apply to individuals who transfer resources for less than fair market value to gain eligibility," Bond said. "Penalties include restricting medical assistance coverage, resulting in ineligibility," he continued.

KSP flights target pot growers

Messenger Enquirer

The Kentucky State Police will be performing their summer marijuana sweep, with helicopter flights being planned for every post district across Kentucky.

While KSP officials plan to visit every county during the eradication sweep, the amount of time spent in each county will depend on how much marijuana is found in the initial flyover, KSP officials said.

"In eastern Kentucky, we'll fly 10 to 12 weeks this summer," said Trooper Paul Blanton, a KSP public affairs officer. In that area, KSP's marijuana eradication team searches in areas such as national forests, Blanton said.

Western Kentucky counties will also be flown as part of the summer program, Blanton said. "Each post area, and each county in the post area, will be flown, but the amount of time given to any specific area will depend on how much marijuana is found on the ground," he said.

"If a helicopter spends one day flying one county, or three hours flying one county, and they find nothing, they'll move on," Blanton said.

Trooper Corey King, public information officer for KSP's Henderson post, said post officials expect to have a few days of flying time this summer. The helicopter crew will coordinate with troopers on the ground, King said. When marijuana is spotted, the helicopter will direct the ground team to the site, where the marijuana is collected for destruction.

The eradication flights have been successful and have even driven some marijuana growers to flee, King said.

"It's not uncommon for (the team) to see those who cultivate marijuana coming out west" to escape the scrutiny KSP puts on eastern Kentucky with the flights, King said. Eastern Kentucky growers will also plant "dummy" marijuana plants that are meant to be found, while attempting to hide their real fields, he said.

The eradication team flies fewer hours compared to previous years. But Blanton said the budget for the flights is the same this year as in 2012 and is not expected to change.

Less marijuana is found, partly because marijuana produced indoors is more valuable than marijuana grown in a forest or field. King said a marijuana plant grown indoors is worth about $1,000 more than one grown outside.

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Salyers says ‘good-bye’ to mascot role at CU

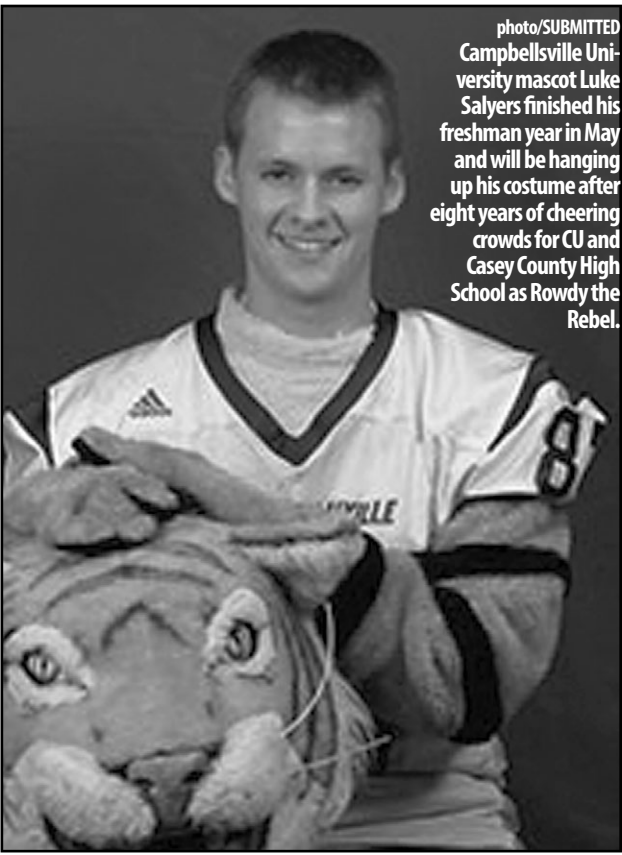

By Rita “Peat” Harris
Sports Correspondent

Typically in the sports world, when you are good at what you do, fans and enemies alike know your face and name. However, there is one sports celebrity whose name goes unknown in place of another name and face: the school mascot. When you are a good mascot, people tend to even forget there is a person underneath the big suit. Luke Salyers has gotten pretty used to that idea during his five year mascot career, and in fact, he kind of likes being a mystery to most. “I think it’s kind of fun because people walk by me and talk to me all of the time and they have no idea (it’s me),” Salyers said. Salyers took on the role of being Casey County High School’s mascot, Rowdy the Rebel, his freshman year and embraced the role through his 2013 graduation. In fact, Salyers enjoyed the mascot antics so much, he even attended camps and training to better his skills.

It paid off, literally, in the end, with a scholarship to Campbellsville University where he began to sport a furry orange suit as Clawz the Tiger. As Clawz, Salyers was an instant campus celebrity, even if his peers who sat next to him in classes had no idea. Not only did Salyers have the job of pumping up the crowd at sporting events, but the school looked to him for spreading the spirit of Campbellsville and promoting everything it had to offer from restaurants to the school itself. “Campbellsville this year came out with a grill restaurant that serves burgers and stuff and to promote it they wanted Clawz, the Tiger, to be in the video,” said Salyers. “So one morning I had to wake up early and get in the suit and for two or three hours we shot a commercial and they played it on TV and in the movie theater.” Salyers also suited up for college fairs at area schools, including CCHS. He even visited elementary students at Russell County’s elementary school college day. Being the face of Campbellsville athletics also meant Salyers — Clawz — was expected to interact with special campus visitors. “One time the Lexington Legends baseball team and their mascot came down for a promotion during lunch and I had to go there and hang out with them and get my picture taken,” he said. Another difference in Salyers’ college versus high school mascot experience was the fact he felt like he was a part of a team. “It was nice to have a team to be a part of,” Salyers said. “Sometimes when we got out of a 10 or 11 o’clock practice they’d all go to Huddle House and they’d invite me to go with them ... Christmas parties and little stuff like that and stuff I wouldn’t have done (they included me).” Salyers even traveled with the Campbellsville co-ed cheer squad to Orlando, Fla. for the national cheerleading competition. “While they did their routine I was on the mats with them and I had this gigantic flag and I was there to keep the crowd pumped for Campbellsville,” said Salyers, noting they were one of the few competing schools who brought a mascot. “I had a blast and got to miss out on four days of class and hang out at the beach.” Despite his successful and fun run as both Rowdy and Clawz, Salyers’ adventures inside a mascot suit have come to an end with the conclusion of his freshman year at Campbellsville. “I have transferred to WKU for both family and personal reasons,” he said, adding he will not be involved in their mascot. “It’s kind of a bittersweet feeling,” Salyers said. “On one hand I’ve done it for so long that it’s going to be a big change to not have to be a mascot if I go to a sporting event or pep rally. On the other (hand), it’s very relieving finally being able to relax and take a break from sports.” Salyers said part of his decision is to enable him to focus more on his academics, which he plans to pursue becoming a history professor. “I believe that I’m ready to be done, but hopefully one day when I’m a professor I could perhaps coach mascots or something similar because it had such a great influence in my life that I’d like to share that with others.”

The beautiful Independence Day weather drew a crowd of 80 participants to Friday’s first holiday activity in downtown Liberty. Runners and fans came out at 8 a.m. for the traditional Liberty Bell 5K run/walk. The blue skies and sunshine were a much appreciated change from last year’s downpour. The event supports the Casey County High School cross country and track teams. Cody Ellison was the overall winner of the event, finishing in 17:16. Ana Kolesnitnenko was not only the overall female finisher, but the second place finisher overall with a time of 20:22. Awards were also presented to the top two female and male finishers in seven age divisions. Award winners included:

Female

Whitney Clements, Alyssa Sharp, (12 and under); Joanna Lemmon, Maddi Lee, (13-19); Lacy Griffith, Allison Wofford, (20-29); Christie Wethington, Ashley Neat, (30-39); Tabitha Bell, Starla

Ellison, (40-49); Maleena Nevells, Beverly Payton, (50-59); Brenda Wilson, Maxine Clements, (60-69).

Male

Tanner Durham, Nathan Garland, (12 and under); Noah Brown, Joel Lemmon, (13-19); David Borchers, Ben Wofford, (20-29); Chad Weddle, Cameron Cain, (30-39); Rodney Hines, Blaine Staat, (40-49); Pat Jenkins, Mark Blair, (50-59); and Greg Neat, Raymond Burgess, (60-69).

Clementsville Crawl benefit run

More than 100 people attended and there were 79 runners and walkers in the first Clementsville Crawl 5k and 1 mile fun walk on June 28 in downtown Clementsville. The event was held to raise money for Zach Summers, who has a brain tumor and is currently undergoing chemotherapy and radiation treatments. Winners in each age division were, front row, from left, Maxine Clements, Beverly Gabehart, Beverly Peyton, Brenda Goode, Sherrie Beard, Sarah Harne, unknown, Kaitlin Frederick, Ashley Hayes, Mollie Harne, unknown. Back row, Tony Konvalin, Blaine Staat, Phillip Roy, unknown, Marty Carmicle, and Noah Brown.

SPORTS TALK

The boys of summer

Chris
ZOLLNER
Sports
Correspondent

Don’t look now, but summer is quickly passing us by. I know it seems like school just let out, but as a parent, full time student, and the husband of a teacher, I can already feel the change in the air. If you don’t want to take my word for it just check your local listings, and you’ll find that the Major League Baseball All-Star break is less than a week away. As this issue is going to press I’ll be making my way into the upper decks of Great American Ball Park to watch the Cincinnati Redlegs take on my old hometown Chicago Cubs. Last year, I managed to make four Reds games, but this will be my first of 2014, and as fast as the summer is going I’m afraid it could be the only one, especially if they don’t make the playoffs. The Reds are my adopted home team and, considering I’ve not been to a Cubs game since Greg Maddux and Ryne Sandberg were still there, I’ll be rooting for Cincy. It should also make the ride home easier since my wife and the rest of her family that will be in attendance are also big Reds fans. The Reds are currently six games back from the Milwaukee Brewers, who lead the National League with a record of 52-37. After being swept by the Padres on the west coast, the Reds came home to face the Brewers and managed to pick up two wins. The five-game home stand against the Cubs this week, followed by three against their fellow NL Central Division foe Pittsburgh Pirates, may just provide the lift they need going into the break. The team is 8-0-1 in series against NL Central rivals Chicago, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh. Joey Votto took Sunday off in the series finale against Milwaukee as he continues to rebound from a left quad strain that put him on the disabled list in June. The coming rest should help move that rehab process along, but not all of his teammates will get the same chance. The Reds are sending four players to the All-Star Game in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Starting pitcher Johnny Cueto and catcher Devin Mesoraco will be in the all-star line-up. Joining them as reserves in Minneapolis will be closer Aroldis Chapman and third baseman Todd Frazier. Cueto enjoys an ERA of 1.99, and Chapman’s cannon of an arm has produced 17 saves in 19 attempts. Mesoraco is batting over .300 on the season with 15 home runs; he’s chasing Frazier in that department who has 17 on the year with an average of .291 overall. This will make the third time in five years that the Reds have sent four players to the All-Star Game. While the game marks the halfway point in the MLB season for the boys of summer, for the rest of us it means we are just a few short weeks away from school starting back up. A quick walk down the seasonal aisles of Walmart or Shopko and you’ll find coolers, BBQ’s and various summer products already marked down and being replaced by Back-to-School supplies. So hurry while you can and make a run to Cincy and enjoy an afternoon or evening at the ballpark with the kids. The season will be over before you know it, and like Don Henley would say, it’ll pass you by faster than a Deadhead sticker on a Cadillac. Don’t look back. You can never look back.

CORRECTIONS & CLARIFICATIONS

In an alumni profile story in last week’s issue, former Casey County High School “Rowdy the Rebel” mascot Luke Salyers was incorrectly identified as Luke Coffman. A new story about Salyers appears above.

EXTENSION NEWS

Summer canning, food preservation time is here

Food Preservation Boot Camp

Wednesday, July 30, 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Extension Education Building. Registration deadline is July 25. Fee is $20 (some scholarships available). Class size is limited to register early.

The number one reason to can, dry or freeze food is to preserve produce from the garden or local fresh farm produce. Preserving garden fresh produce allows the preserver to control the amount of flavor, preservatives, pesticides, and allergens in food. Personal satisfaction, gift giving, and even economic considerations are other good reasons to preserve food.

Topics to be covered include drying foods, knife skills, basic food preservation safety skills, canning techniques, pressure canning, hot water bath canning, and freezing techniques. This is a hands-on learning experience.

Registration fee includes lunch, all materials and recipes, Blue Ball book, freebies, hands-on learning environment. You will take home jars of food you have preserved.

Call the extension office at 606-787-7384 for information and registration.

Quilting 101

Wednesday, July 16, 10 a.m., Extension Education Building.

Folded Star: taught by Billye Watson. The class is free and open to the public. Please call to register at 606-787-7384. Also, bring a snack or finger food to share as we plan to work through lunch.

Supplies You Need to Bring:

- (4) – 5 inch squares dark fabric for second row
- (4) – 4 ½ inch squares for outside row
- (4) – 4 inch squares for center
- (4) – 5 ½ inch squares to outside row

Debbie SHEPHERD
County Extension
Agent for Home
Economics

(1) – 5 ½ inch square to hide batting on front

(1) – 8 inch square backing

(1) – 8 inch square batting 40 inches x 2 inches binding

If you have an iron and a towel, please bring.

Time for Pickles

There is nothing that sets off a cold cut sandwich better than the taste of a pickle, and with so many varieties, you are bound to find one to suit every palate. So it probably won't surprise you that pickles are a popular home food preservation item.

To ensure safe, tasty home-canned pickles, always follow research-based recipes, such as those offered by Extension, that have been tested for product safety. Follow the recipe and use the proper amounts of the appropriate ingredients to yield the best flavor from your food and to prevent food-borne illness.

Quick-process pickles usually consist of cucumbers or other vegetables, vinegar, spices and seasonings. Always use fresh, firm vegetables for pickling. Discard a one-sixteenth slice from the blossom end of the vegetable to help keep the final product firm. Blossoms contain enzymes that can cause vegetables to soften. Soaking the cucumbers or other vegetables in salt water for several hours before covering with the pickling liquid will allow for easier packing.

When making pickles, use only commercial vinegar that has at least 5 percent acidity. Do not dilute the vinegar unless specified in the recipe, because the acidity is needed for a safe product. The addition of vinegar makes pickles a high-acid food, which allows them to be safely processed using a boiling-water canner. Use canning or pickling salt. Table salt may make the pickling mixture cloudy. Use white sugar unless the recipe calls for brown.

Quick-process pickles are more flavorful if allowed to sit for several weeks after processing. This allows the vegetables to aromatically blend with the seasonings and spices.

If you are new to home canning, a good place to start is with the Extension publication FCS3-578 "Home Canning Basics." More information on pickling and recipes for beginning, intermediate and advanced canners and for individuals with dietary restrictions are available in publication FCS3-582 "Home Canning Pickled and Fermented Foods." Both publications are available through the Casey County Cooperative Extension Service. Source: Debbie Clouthier, Extension Associate for Food Safety and Preservation.

Kentucky Cucumbers

Some of the first summer vegetables harvested in Kentucky gardens are cool, crisp cucumbers. Cucumbers can be found in local gardens and farmers markets between June and mid-September. The internal temperature of a cucumber can be 20 degrees cooler than the outside air and with steamy Kentucky days these popular vegetables bring coolness to summer meals.

A one-half cup serving of cucumber yields only seven calories and is a good source of vitamins A and C. Select firm cucumbers with a rich green color and no soft spots. Cucumbers that bulge in the middle are usually filled with large, watery seeds and lack flavor. Whole cucumbers can be stored in the crisper drawer of the refrigerator for up to one week.

One of the most common vegetables planted in Kentucky gardens is corn. Depending on the variety, peak season for sweet corn in Kentucky is late June to mid-September.

Corn is high in protein and carbohydrates and is a good source of vitamin C. A one-half cup of cooked corn contains 90 calories.

When selecting corn, make sure the husks are green, tight, and fresh looking. Pull the husk back to make sure the ear contains tightly packed rows of plump kernels. The kernels should be smaller at the tip of the ear. Large kernels indicate over maturity. If you pinch a corn kernel, milk-colored juice should spurt out from the kernel. The sooner you cook corn the better. If you will not be cooking corn shortly after purchasing or picking, you should store in the refrigerator or in another cool area. Refrigeration helps the corn retain its sugar and vitamin C. Warmth causes the sugar content of corn to be converted into starch. This process will cause the ears to become less sweet. Keeping the corn in the husk will also help retain moisture. If possible do not remove the husk until ready to use.

To preserve the highest quality, corn should be cooked, canned, frozen, or dried as soon as possible after harvest. The longer you wait to process, the lower the quality.

To capture the fresh taste of cucumbers and corn together, try this tasty salsa.

Cucumber, Corn, and Bean Salsa

2-3 large cucumbers
2 tomatoes
1 yellow bell pepper
1 small red onion
¼ cup chopped fresh cilantro
½ cup black beans
½ cup fresh whole kernel corn, cooked
1 ounce package dry ranch dressing mix
⅛ cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar, optional

Directions: Wash all vegetables. Finely chop cucumbers, tomatoes, pepper, and onion. Combine in a large mixing bowl with chopped cilantro. Drain and rinse beans and add to chopped vegetables. Add corn. If using canned corn instead of fresh, drain off liquid prior to adding to vegetables.

In a small bowl, mix together ranch dressing packet, vinegar, and sugar. Pour dressing over vegetables and mix well. Serve immediately or refrigerate until chilled.

Yield: Makes 20, ½ cup servings.

Nutrition Analysis: 50 calories, 0 g fat, 130 mg sodium, 7 g carbohydrates, 2 g fiber, 70% Daily Value of vitamin C and 6% Daily Value of vitamin A.

Celebrating life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness

Casey County's downtown Fourth of July celebration sees a good crowd

Williams said, referring to the trial.

Also, Williams said that subpoenaed witnesses were present in the judicial center, with one having traveled from Virginia.

In addition, Williams referred to the hardship faced by the alleged victims in the case, whom he called "little girls."

"It's been hard on these little girls. They don't want to have to be dragged back in here for this and they shouldn't have to go through this. It's hard on the mother and daughters," Williams said.

Williams said that it was the defendant's duty to ask for items they know they don't have.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Jeff Eastham told Vance that he and Williams didn't know about the "glitch" with the tape until Thursday, saying that he and Williams spoke directly with Coffman and Weddle and therefore had no knowledge of what was on the tape Wright gave George in 2012.

Eastham asked Vance not to declare a mistrial but to set another trial date.

George responds

As to the allegation that he should have asked about the five minute tape if Reusser knew the interview had gone much longer, George said he had what the Commonwealth gave him.

"The Commonwealth has always provided defense counsel with discovery and if you look at my motion, I indicated that this video was a short five minute video. That's the evidence, the discovery, that the Commonwealth provided me and I have to rely on that," George said.

Vance had ordered Williams to give George the complete 45 minute video during Monday afternoon's hearing.

George maintained that he still didn't have the entire tape that he only got to watch at 9 p.m. on Monday night, not giving him adequate time to prepare a defense on behalf of his client.

George also referred to not having reports until Monday from a doctor who did a physical exam on one of the girls nor the report from a counselor who was expected to testify about the effects the alleged sexual abuse had on the girls.

George denied that his motion for Vance to declare a mistrial was to gain a "tactical advantage," or to further delay the trial.

"To go forward with this trial with them wanting to introduce into evidence a video and audio interview of the defendant that he has never seen that I only saw for the first time at about 9 last night and that I've not viewed any of this information in preparing the defense of this case is prejudicial to this defendant," George said.

George apologized that a mistrial might inconvenience some people who came to testify.

"This is the most important thing that his rights be protected at this point. And I know of no other procedure at this point than to declare a mistrial because you have to declare a mistrial. I don't know what else you can do," George told Vance.

At this point, Eastham discounted George's perceived need to have more time than he used to view the video the night before.

"It's not anything that requires him to consider 'Oh, we need an expert' or any more than meeting with his client on what he saw and what he said. I don't know what other preparatory steps watching that video would call for," Eastham said.

George countered that he could not be prepared to cross examine witnesses from that video or use the information in the video in preparing his opening statement to the jury.

"His rights are the most important rights to be protected. He's the one that's facing multiple Class A felonies that could send him to prison for life. And we're just going to bypass that just to provide convenience to some of the witnesses?" George said.

Williams replied that he's not concerned about whether or not the witnesses will be inconvenienced by a mistrial and subsequent trial.

"We're here to protect the rights of those children and to me, that's the most important thing here today. His rights are important but not the most important," Williams said.

"He hasn't been convicted of anything yet," George said.

"Well, he's going to be," Williams shot back.

As one final appeal for

Vance not to declare a mistrial, Eastham said that it's not uncommon for defense attorneys to speak directly with law enforcement officers who conducted an interview with a defendant.

Vance declares a mistrial

"It is what it is. The fact remains there is a taped interview that lasted 45 minutes that I was told, that wasn't provided until last night when we had a jury seated," Vance said.

However, Vance wanted it clear that things happen and no one is at fault.

"I want to make clear for the record that this is not the fault of the Commonwealth Attorney's office. I think it's just an older case and the change of command in the Commonwealth Attorney's office in the meantime. If the office has it, they'll provide it," she said.

Vance said that she was convinced that should the trial begin on Tuesday that it would be ruled "reversible error" by the Court of Appeals.

"I believe it would be reversed by the Court of Appeals and here it's a trial again," she said, declaring a mistrial.

Vance set a new trial date for Jan. 5 at 9 a.m.

POLICE NEWS

Man charged with DUI

Johnnie R. Grider, 53, of 448 South Highway 76, Russell Springs, was arrested on July 7 by Deputy Jamie Walters at the Roadside Park and charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs. Walters stated that Grider was shaking and his eyes were glossy. Walters also stated that Grider's performance on the standard field sobriety tests showed the probability that he was under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs.
